When Dr. Sudhir Parikh received the prestigious Ellis Island Medal of Honor recently for his lifetime of community service, it was viewed by his friends and family as well-deserved recognition of this physician's obsessive desire for improving lives.

Aside from spending over two decades treating patients, Dr. Parikh has fought other ills in society through contributing cash as well as his time, influence, and efforts, all unselfishly and with little regard for fanfare. It was in characteristic form, then, that the good doctor dedicated his most recent award to the community for which he's toiled tirelessly.

He also went out of his way to thanked the award sponsors--the National Ethnic Coalition of Organizations--and the people of the United States for what he called the 'growing recognition of the contributions made to America by Indian Americans.'

A noted immunologist and allergy specialist by profession, Dr. Parikh has long been at the forefront of a growing drive for empowerment among Indian Americans, with a view towards securing more lobbying power in the US Government and Administration. On more than one occasion, he lobbied successfully in Washington DC when critical votes related to India were being discussed before Congress.

Currently serving as President of the Federation of Indian Associations (FIA), Dr. Parikh is also Patron and Trustee of the AAPI Charitable foundation and founding board member and vice chairman of the Indian American Republican Council. He is also
